

GRANT SANG TO MRS. LOVETT ON EASTER SUNDAY

Co-respondent Admits
His Visits to Brooklyn
Millionaire's Wife.

The deposition of the cross-examination of the co-respondent took up the morning session to-day in the hearing of the suit for divorce instituted by George E. Lovett, millionaire real estate broker, against his wife, Grace E. Lovett, before Justice Maddox, in the Supreme Court, Brooklyn.

Herbert Ketcham, lawyer for Mrs. Lovett, read the cross-examination of Harry Alfred Grant, manager of the Florida Electric Company, whose deposition read yesterday contained admissions of intimacy with Mrs. Lovett in a Jacksonville (Fla.) boarding-house.

In his cross-examination Grant fixes the time of the alleged infidelity of April 10, 11 and 12, 1903, by the fact that one of the nights fell on Easter Sunday. Grant explained in his deposition that he was slated to sing at the Episcopal Church that night, but didn't keep the engagement.

She Delays the Trial.

Mrs. Lovett delayed the opening of the trial to-day by expending twenty minutes late. Looking pale and careworn, with dark rings under her eyes, she came into court escorted by her mother and the trained nurse who has been in attendance since the opening of the case. Mr. Lovett was on hand bright and early, apparently well pleased by the damaging testimony given against his wife yesterday in the deposition of the co-respondent.

Lawyer Ketcham reviewed the cross-examination of yesterday, when Grant, in explaining why he had confessed, said that he didn't know the law and feared the power of Lovett's money. He said he was averse to publicity and supposed the case would be quietly decided.

In today's reading of the cross-examination it was brought out that Grant was only twenty-three years old when he met Mrs. Lovett in Jacksonville. He said he had told Lovett at their meeting in February, 1903, that his wife had opened a letter from Mrs. Lovett and that he feared trouble from Mrs. Grant.

In answer to the question, "What made you confess? didn't you know you would be detested and hated as a vile and contemptible thing?" Grant said: "I thought it the easiest way out of the mess."

He then told of his life from the time he was born in Athens, Ga., until he left at the age of nineteen, his rise from city salesman to manager of the electric company in his short time in Jacksonville. He then positively fixed the date of the conduct complained of by Easter Sunday. The cross-examination went closely into his alleged relations with Mrs. Lovett, at which he was very vague, answering "I don't remember" to many questions.

Did He Take Off Shoes?

To the question: "How were you dressed the first night?" Grant replied after a long pause: "I was trying to remember whether I took off my shoes before I went into her room."

The large crowd which attended to-day was plainly bored to find the proceedings were confined to the reading of depositions to the jury, to hear which every one else had to strain ears to catch a word.

MAN SHOT DEAD IN PISTOL DUEL ON THE STREET

Revolver in Hand. He Is Found with a Bullet in His Heart.

Antonio De Fele Cimardo, a longshoreman, of No. 149 Columbia street, was shot dead in a pistol duel in Harrison street, between Strong place and Henry streets, Brooklyn, early to-day. His murderer escaped. Residents of the thoroughfare were awakened by four pistol shots and when they reached their windows they saw a tall, stout man reel and fall to the sidewalk. While a spare little chap darted into Henry street and disappeared. When the police arrived they found a revolver with three empty chambers in the dead man's hand. A revolver with only one chamber empty lay close by where it had been dropped by the murderer. Evidently the taller man had been the aggressor, as the bullet which struck him just above the heart must have proved instantly fatal. A back book found on the dead man revealed his identity. Some of Cimardo's friends said that when he knocked off work last night he was met by the short man who killed him.
